COURSE DESCRIPTION

This course provides an introduction to issues of historical causation, argumentation, and evidence through the lens of European revolutions between the late eighteenth century and the early twentieth. After introductory units on historical methods and the phenomenon of revolution itself, we examine the French Revolution, the Revolutions of 1848---49, and the Russian Revolution as both local and transnational events. We work closely with primary sources and consider how each revolutionary “moment” functioned politically but also on social, aesthetic, cultural, intellectual, and psychological levels. We examine the various and often contradictory ways that scholars have told the stories of European revolutions, constantly weighing the tensions of systemic change versus individual agency in the processes of revolution.

COURSE OBJECTIVES

This course is intended to cultivate the skills essential to becoming a historian or, at least for starters, a history major. We engage critically with a range of primary sources, learning to interrogate their authorship, biases, contexts, and variably interpretable meanings. We examine the work of modern scholars and learn to identify their arguments and use of evidence. We position their arguments in relation to one another, developing sensitivity to the multiplicity of ways in which one can construct – or make – history. We cultivate skills in the clear, concise formulation of ideas with particular attention to the writing of thesis statements and the marshalling of appropriate evidence in support of our own scholarly arguments. We nurture information literacy as well as public speaking, conducting a semester---long individual research project culminating in formal presentations and a substantial annotated bibliography.

COURSE REQUIREMENTS AND GRADING

This course is based in large part on discussion as the most effective platform for inquiry-based learning. Although occasional lectures provide a historical framework for the material we cover, our meetings center upon analyses of assigned readings and viewings, and it is through the free and open posing of questions and exchange of ideas that we all benefit the most from the class. Your preparation and engagement, then, are crucial to its success. Please come to class awake, on time, and prepared with the reading assignments for that day in hand, thoughtfully read and annotated. Sometimes I will send out discussion points via email before we meet as a tool to help us focus on common themes and issues. You should use these prompts as guideposts through the assigned readings – though by no means should they restrict your interpretations – and come prepared with answers, questions, or counterarguments in response. Please have appropriate textual citations at the ready to support your comments. Laptops and digital readers are not allowed in class except in the case of special learning needs to be discussed with me at the beginning of the semester.

I do take attendance as well as careful notes about the quality, frequency, and collaborative character (or not) of your participation in class discussions, group projects, etc. Because I value so strongly our cooperative learning together in the classroom, your participation grade makes up fully one third of your overall grade for the course. Thus it is in everyone's best interests that you come to every class except in case of dire, documented emergency. After three uncommunicated absences you will receive an F for the participation portion of the course grade. After four uncommunicated absences you will fail the course entirely. "Communication" simply means that I expect to hear from you personally via email or phone as soon as you know you must be absent from class. It is your responsibility to work though and master the materials you missed if you are unable to be present in class.

Participation	35%
Film review assignment	5%
Thesis statement assignment	5%
Thesis statement revision	5%
Article review assignment	5%
Research project scaffolding components	10%
Research project annotated bibliography	15%
Research project formal presentation	20%

Do not be alarmed! There are a number of small, cumulative items here that are designed to build skills and provide exposure to many of the kinds of assignments you will be asked to master in future history classes. Each of these will be explained in more detail over the course of the semester. The most substantive assignment is an individual project developed in consultation with the instructor on any topic relating to European revolutions between 1789 and 1917. You will be responsible for 1) a number of small scaffolding assignments as you develop your project 2) a scholarly annotated bibliography recording the research your project entailed 3) a formal, end-of-semester presentation of your research findings. Also, please note that there is no final exam for this class.

COURSE WRITING MENTOR

In this course we also enjoy the added resource of a writing mentor. You are required to consult with her on two occasions over the course of the semester: when working on 1) the first thesis statement assignment [handed out 2/17, due 2/29] and 2) the research project annotated bibliography [ongoing semester---long project with 1 annotation sample due 3/18 and final bibliography due 5/20].

You may consult with your writing mentor at any point in the process of these two assignments. For the first thesis assignment, you may find it most useful to brainstorm ideas, to discuss the shaping of a coherent and thorough thesis statement, to decide on the proper and most convincing use of evidence, to hammer out an overall structure for the assignment, or any combination of these things. As for the second, you must consult with the writing mentor to get feedback on at least one fully---drafted citation and annotation. The earlier in the process you do this, the more time this feedback will save you in the long run.

You are also strongly encouraged to consult with her as you are developing your ideas for the outside research project (presentation and annotated bibliography). You certainly should feel free to work with the mentor on more than the two occasions required of you for the course.

Please note that 1) you should make and respect office hour appointments with the writing mentor just as you would with professors or other student colleagues; and 2) her role is to serve as a supplemental resource, not as a replacement for the professor. I am responsible for all of the assessment of your work as with any other course at Grinnell.

Finally, students with any form of documented disability are encouraged to contact me early in the semester so that we can arrange for your learning needs to be met and for you to participate fully in the class. You will also need to provide documentation of your condition(s) to the Dean for Student Academic Support and Advising, Joyce Stern, on the third floor of the Rosenfield Center (x3702).
