Course Description
Why is it worth studying the history of early modern Europe in our globalized and multicultural present? It used to be that a course covering this geographic and chronological era would take for granted that several well-defined events had ushered in a rational, secular modernity, first for ‘the West’ and then for ‘the rest’ – the Renaissance, the Reformation, the Scientific Revolution, and the beginnings of overseas empire.

As historians began experimenting with new methodologies, however, and calling into question entrenched narratives, the stakes for examining the history of early modern Europe shifted as well. Recasting events of world significance as contingent and contested processes both diminished their distinctiveness and recuperated the agency of a greater variety of participants. These historiographical shifts also had the effect of revealing that Europe’s status as the origin point of modernity is less incontrovertible fact than a story developed by both early modern men and women, and contemporary scholars, looking to make sense of a rapidly expanding European world. To study early modern Europe in the twenty-first century is to understand why history built around the idea of inevitable progress, led by the West, was so appealing and durable, and why it has proven difficult and perhaps undesirable to construct a single cohesive narrative in its place.

This course will be split into four major units (Renaissance, Reformation, the Scientific Revolution, and the ‘Age of Discovery’), each pairing a narrative of progress and definitive breaking from the past with narratives of gradual, contested, and multifaceted change. Along the way, students will learn how historians build on and challenge preexisting scholarship, about the impact of centering one set of sources over another, the ways in which archival discoveries and digital humanities tools can expand the available source base, and how they can enter into an ongoing set of debates by proposing new avenues and questions for research.

Required Books and Readings
Textbook (Available at Pioneer Bookstore)
Course packet readings available online via P-web; print the week’s readings and bring to class

A note on the readings
The Wiesner-Hanks textbook is intended as a supplement to our lectures and discussions, as well as an additional resource as you complete your writing assignments. All of the other primary and secondary sources are uploaded to P-web in the form of a course reader; please bring the readings to class in hard copy (this counts towards your participation grade). Whenever possible, I have tried to find substantive primary sources for us to read, sometimes in the original language and format. We will practice learning to read – to our eyes! – funny and irregular spelling, densely printed type, unfamiliar formatting, etc.

Your success in this course will depend on your willingness to engage thoughtfully with the material and each other, in your conversation and your note-taking. We will learn a great deal from one another if we come to class prepared, with open minds, ready to contribute and to take intellectual risks. Together, we will practice developing incisive questions, identifying significant passages, tracing common themes, providing evidentiary support for scholarly arguments, and responding productively to disagreements and critiques.

For every class please come prepared with:

1. Hard copies of the readings
2. A ‘short reaction’
   - For primary sources, write a 250- to 300-word paragraph consisting of: 1) an analytical question about the reading; 2) a thesis/topic sentence; 3) support for your argument drawn from the sources
   - For secondary sources, identify: 1) The questions being addressed; 2) the author’s main arguments; 3) how the author positions themselves in relationship to the extant scholarship; 4) how they substantiate their arguments (including the kinds of evidence they draw on); 5) an analytical question of your own about the text

Additional ground rules for class:

1. Initial meeting with Instructor — Please sign up here (https://doodle.com/poll/vfgfhcsh9byi6ff9) for a meeting with me during weeks 1-2. This is so I can get to better know you and your goals for the class!
2. No laptops/phones (except for designated days or with an accommodation letter)

3. Check the class Google Doc: I will post pointers for the reading and questions to consider on a Google Doc before each class here: https://docs.google.com/document/d/1XhsJVxyvfB5A3nbyb4p59yl26Fs2ur9OaZ8MiNL9bo/edit

4. Attendance – You are allowed two excused absences for any reason, without penalty, as long as you notify me ahead of time. Subsequent absences or late arrivals must be approved by Student Services, Athletics Department, Chaplain, etc., or they will count against your total grade (2% each).

3 x 1000-word Response Papers – 25% (see above for draft & final due dates)

For two of our three units (on the Renaissance, Reformation, and Scientific Revolution), you will write a 1000-word analytical paper building on your short reactions for each session, as well as our class discussions. You will design your own analytical question and argument and submit an outline a week in advance of the deadline. Then, based on feedback from me (and potentially a writing tutor), please revise and complete the paper (8% each, 1% for free).

Outlines should consist of:

- A complete introductory paragraph, including your analytical question and thesis
- A complete first body paragraph, including a topic sentence and the evidence and analysis you will use to support it (footnotes required)
- The remainder of your paragraphs (about three to four more) sketched out in bullet points. Begin with your topic sentences for each and include the quotations/evidence you will use to make your case. I should be able to follow clearly the logic of your argument.

All the writing you produce for this class should be footnoted in Chicago-style format. For more information on footnoting, see: https://owl.english.purdue.edu/owl/resource/717/03/

Two take-home exams (20% each), due 03/14 and 05/09

There are two timed take-home midterms essays. They will cover, respectively, the sources and debates from our unit on the Reformation and on the Scientific Revolution and European explorations. The exams are open book, so take notes in class and as you read! You may not, however, consult with one another or use online resources aside from what is posted on P-web.

Final Project – Design a ‘short course’ on early modern European history (25%), due 05/16

In a survey course such as this, many worthwhile and understudied topics have been left out. For your final project, you will have the chance to design your own four-week ‘short course’ on an aspect of early modern European history that we did not cover in detail together. The mini-syllabus will consist of a precis of the course, your driving questions and conclusions, plus daily lesson plans that explore key historiographical debates and useful methodologies for approaching pre-modern sources.

Other Activities

1. Special Collections visit – Week Eight
2. Field Trip to Salisbury House in Des Moines – Week Nine or Ten
Late Assignment Policy
Every student is entitled to two 24-hour grace periods to use on the 1000-word response papers, exams, or final project. You must notify me if you plan to take an extension. Once you have used your grace periods, late assignments will be docked by 1/3 of a grade each day.
